LONDON, June 5.

Dispatches were this morning received at the admiralty from lord Keith. They relate to the increased preparations of the enemy at Boulogne, and mention the capture of some small vessels from Flushing. Letters from on board our blockading squadron, state that the enemy's flotilla is every day in motion, and that of late it has been reinforced from other parts of the channel. An officer writes under the date of Friday last as follows:

"From all the observations I am able to make, and from the information I collect, I am fully persuaded the enemy seriously intend to make an attempt at coming out."

Orders have been given for a very strong Squadron to watch the motions of the Rochefort fleet; and that some fast sailing vessels shall be stationed to give the earliest notice of their putting to sea again, which government have reason to believe they will soon attempt to do.

Dispaches were yesterday received at the admiralty from admiral Drury, on the Irish station: we cannot learn that they bring any very interesting intelligence.

We have of late taken notice of different unpleasant reports, circulated in some of the morning papers. of symptoms of disaffection in Ireland. We are very much inclined to believe that they are mere fabrications —— They are not countenanced by any letters we have seen from Dublin; and we have seen letters and Newspapers of the date of Saturday last.

In the event of the late Sir William Pulteney's having left no will the principal of his shropshire estates, to the amount of above thirty thousand pounds per annum, will fall to the Earl of Darlington: the rest of the Bath, and his own unintailed property, of course devolves on his only daughter the countess of Bath. He is succeeded in his title, and in all his entailed property, consisting of his Scotch and West India estates of about ten thousand pounds per annum, by his nephew, captain Johnstone, of the Goldstream Guards, son of the late governor Johnstone. The amiable and accomplished lady Bath may now be reckoned one of the richest personages in this country, the American property being of incalculable value.

PRICE OF FLOUR.

Fine flour 75s. to 78s. Seconds 65s to 75s. per sack.

In consequence of the large arrivals of foreign wheat, & of the additional quantity expected, it is the general opinion it would have been more adviseable for the farmers to have sent it to market during the late high prices. The expected arrivals are so numerous that a further reduction in the price is expected.

The Spaniards, it appears, are still very active in all their ports, and expect to take a very active share in the war. It is stated that the fleet from Carthagena, consisting of six sail of the line, sailed from Carthagena, on the 27th of April.

We have no certain accounts where this fleet is gone, unless it be to Cadiz, and no intelligence of its passing the straights has yet been received.

June 6.

The collecting of a strong fleet in the Downs, which we mentioned yesterday, is probably in consequence of some information received respecting the movements of the enemy on the French coast; for even the ships which composed the north sea squadron, which had come into Yarmouth a few days ago, have been ordered to the Downs; and find by our port letters that some of them have actually sailed for that station.

It is reported that Bonaparte has arrived at Boulogne, having reached that port on Sunday last. It is said he returned to Paris on the 30th ult. where he only staid that and the following day. We know not on what authority this statement rests, but certain it is that there has been a great bustle at Boulogne for above a week past, as if preparations were making for some more than ordinary occasion; and a firing was heard along the French coast, during a great part of Sunday; on which day fifty gun boats, twenty luggers, and several sloops, were observed on the outside of Boulogne pier.

The prevailing opinion, at the present moment, respecting the combined fleets, is, that one part of them is destined to take possession of the Cape of Good Hope, and the other to secure the Brazils; the former having been ceded to France, and the latter promised to Spain. Should they succeed in such a design, and we see nothing at present that can possibly prevent them, it will be productive of incalculable disasters to our India trade. The enemy possessed of the Cape of Good Hope on one side, and of the Brazils on the other, would form a chain which could not be broken through at any time but by a strong convoy, which ought to be employed on more active services. Deprived of the resources of the Brazils, Portugal must sink by a natural death into the devouring jaws of the King of Terrors, Bonaparte, who would probably lull the fears and lull the hopes of Spain with the possession of that devoted state, until he found an opportunity of adding the kingdoms of Hesperia to that of Italy.

This morning some dispatches, taken on board a Spanish packet by the Æolus privateer, of Guernsey, were brot to the secretary of state's office by the commander of the Æolus. They were thrown overboard by the Spaniards, but recovered by the exertions of the people belonging to the privateer. It is very probable these dispatches may lead to some knowledge of the intended operations of the enemy.

STOCKHOLM, May 23.

It is understood here that the treaty between England, Russia, and this country, is finally arranged and concluded.

NEW YORK, June 25.

A letter received in this city from a respectable gentleman at Detroit, dated 24th of June, states, that "the Sac Indians and Oiowans have sent in their Chiefs to the council at Malden.—— They are spreading the war belt in every direction; their object is war with the Osages on the Mississippi.—— They applied for the assistance of the Hurons, who answered, that they were in treaty of peace (made at Grenville) with the United States; that they had buried the hatchet, and would not take it up again. The Sacs and Oiowans replied, "We shall then know how to treat you when we come forward." The Osages, it is said, will claim the protection of West Louisiana; and it is believed, that the United States will be involved in the war. The troops ought to be returned to this place, and the fortifications strengthened. We are, indeed, in a miserable situation for defence—the citadel in ashes, the fort deserted, and only a few straggling soldiers about the ship yards."

The letter from which the above intelligence was taken, contains a description of the sufferings to which the inhabitants of Detroit have been reduced by the late conflagration of their village. "About ninety families," says the letter, "are left without a roof to shelter them; with the ground for their bed, and the heavens for their canopy—yet we are not in dispair; a spirit of industry appears again to pervade all ranks, and I hope that, by the assistance that will be obtained from the affluent, Detroit, will flourish once again."

The inhabitants have appointed a committee to estimate the damages, and to solicit and receive contributions for the relief of their unfortunate town.

From Jamaica papers to the 2d ult.

KINGSTON, June 22d.

On Thursday morning the following squadron sailed from Port Royal for the Windward Island, for the purpose of joining Vice Admiral Lord Nelson, viz.

	Guns.
St. George,	98	Com. Hon. M. de Courcy.
Atlas,	74	Capt. S. Pym
Centaur,	74	H. Whitley.
Eagle,	74	D. Colley.
Success,	32	C. Scott.

The St. George unfortunately got aground on three fathoms bank in consequence of the failure of the land breeze shortly after her leaving Port Royal. In the evening Le Cref brig, capt. Chamberlain, went out to her assistance, and we are happy to find that she has got off without much damage, and has proceeded with the rest of the squadron. Le Cref returned into port yesterday morning.

MONTEGO BAY, June 29.

The militia of this parish were disbanded last Sunday morning, and the martial law will expire on the 22d instant.

[The embargo at Montego Bay, was taken off the day the schooner Victory sailed.]

July 26.

The ship Hibernia, captain Doane, has arrived at Boston from Greenock. She left there on the 7th of June, and brings London papers to the 4th, but no part of the intelligence they contain has yet transpired.

Mr. Dalton, who arived at Plymouth, Mass. in the schooner Miles Standish, direct from Lisbon, passed through this city yesterday, on his way to Washington with dispatches for our government from Mr. Munroe. He informs that Mr. Munroe left Madrid on the 26th of May, and that he had entirely failed to accomplish the object of his mission. He was to have returned to London by the way of Paris.

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

MONDAY, JULY 29.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Fort Massac, to the editor of the Kentucky Gazette, dated June 8.

"General Wilkinson and suite arrived here a few days ago, on his way to take charge of the government of Upper Louisiana, to which he has been lately appointed; he also holds his rank as commander in chief of the United States army, of which St. Louis will be the head quarters. From this union of civil and military in the same arm, will, no doubt, result a very energetic government. He remains at this place some time, to make arrangements for the organization of his government, in which it is conjectured he is aided by Col. Aaron Burr, who arrived here two days since, on his way to New Orleans.

"We have heard nor seen nothing to confirm or strengthen the supposition that Col. Burr is to supercede W. C. C. Claiborne in the government of the Territory of New Orleans. The General pays him the most marked attention; and Burr appears to take the greatest pains to conciliate the esteem of every person about him."

Extract of a letter from Cadiz, dated June, 1805.

"One of the ships of war, of 80 guns that was in this port, went out some days since to cruize in the mouth of the harbor, and yesterday met with an English frigate of forty-four guns; the Englishman attacked him and maintained a brisk fight of four hours and then sheered off, the Spaniard being too heavy for him but so badly managed that the frigate though considerably injured easily made his escape.

This Glorious victory, if it deserves that name, was yesterday celebrated in Cadiz, from whence the sight was seen, by ringing of bells' beating of drums, &c.

The Salem Gazette of July 19, says—

"Hitherto our fishermen have deemed themselves safe from British impressments in their humble occupation, and many of them have therefore thought it unnecessary to provide themselves with protections. A frigate, taking advantage of this confidence in British generosity, has gone among our craft upon the fishing ground, and taken out such men as they found destitute of protections, and the frigate has gone into Halifax with the men on board. Information having been forwarded of this transaction, a small vessel sailed from hence yesterday for Halifax, carrying the necessary documents to establish the birth and the citizenship of those who are impressed, with the view of obtaining their release; in which we hope they will be successful."

UNACCOUNTABLE SECRECY.

The maxim that a republican government should have no secrets has been strongly urged heretofore by the democratic party. We never were of that opinion—we should think it the greatest absurdity to disclose affairs of state, when that disclosure could only injure the public interest, and produce no good but the gratification of an ill advised curosity. But there are circumstances in which much injury is sustained from an unnecessary and wanton suppression of information.—How far this is applicable at present the public will judge.

It is well known that for some time past our trade to the island of Curracoa, has been interrupted by English cruizers. Large sacrifices of American property have been made, by captures and condemnations at Jamaica, on the ground of breach of blockade. Our merchants have felt themselves embarrassed, irritated, and aggrieved. The papers have been filled with severe remarks against the English, for this supposed unjust depredation upon our commerce. Information was received from Jamaica, that the island of Curracoa was in a state of blockade and that our government were well acquainted with the fact. Nothing official yet transpired—more property was risked on the uncertainty of actual blockade, and more sacrifices made.

Now to the question, did government know of this blockade? The repeated and heavy losses sustained by several gentlemen of New York, induced them to request the necessary information of the secretary of state. We have seen a copy of Mr. Madison's answer. From this it appears that as early as April, 1804, the British ministe have regular information of this blockade to the department of ſtate of the United States. Our government for what reaſon we are at a loſs to conjecture, did not think proper "to participate in the promulgation of the notice, tranſmitted by the Britiſh commander. The blockade of Curracoa is accordingly left to make itſelf known in the ordinary manner." !!

Theſe are facts and the blockade has made itſelf known by capture and confiſcation of property to a large extent; government has witneſſed theſe events, kept their ſecret, and permitted individuals blindly to buy their experience at a cruel rate.

How far this is conſiſtent with the avowed principles of the democratso r whether this is one of thoſe circumſtances in which the public good required to be kept ſecret, we leave men of candor and judgment to determine.

(True American.)

EXTRACTS

From the valuable Eſſays of Count Rumford.

"In all caſes where it was deſigned to preſerve the heat of any ſubſtance which is confined in a metalic veſſel, it will greatly contribute to that end, if the external ſurface of the veſſel be very clean and bright; but, if the object be to cool any thing quickly, in a metalic veſſel, the external ſurface of the veſſel ſhould be painted, or covered with ſome of thoſe ſubſtances which have been found to emit calorific rays in great abundance.

'Poliſhed tea urns may be kept boiling hot with a much leſs expence of ſpirit of wine (burnt in a lamp under them) than ſuch as are varniſhed; and the cleaner and brighter diſhes, and covers for diſhes, are made, which are uſed for bringing victuals on the table, and for keeping it hot, the more effectually will they anſwer that purpoſe.

'Saucepans, and other kitchen utenſils, which are very clean and bright on the outſide, may be kept hoter with a ſmaller fire than ſuch as are black and dirty; but the bottoms of a ſaucepan, or boiler, ſhould be blackened, in order that its contents may be made to boil quickly, and with a ſmall expence of fuel.

'If garden walls painted black acquire heat faſter, when expoſed to the ſun's direct rays than when they are not ſo painted, they will likwiſe cool faſter, during the night; and gardeners muſt be beſt able to determine whether theſe rapid changes of temperature are, or are not, favourable to fruit trees.

'Black cloths are well known to be very warm in the ſun; but they are far from being ſo in the ſhade, and eſpecially in cold weather. No coloured cloathing is ſo cold as black, when the temperature of the air is below that of the ſurface of the ſkin, and when the body is not expoſed to the action of calorific rays from other ſubſtances.

'It has been ſhown, that the warmth of cloathing depends much on the poliſh of the ſurface of the ſubſtance of which it is made; and hence we may conclude that, in chooſing the colour of our winter garments thoſe dyes ſhould be avoided which tend moſt to deſtroy that poliſh: and, as white ſurface reflects more light than an equal ſurface, equally poliſhed, of any other colour, there is much reaſon to think that white garments are warmer than any other, in cold weather. They are univerſally conſidered as the cooleſt that can be worn, in very hot weather, and eſpecially when a perſon is expoſed to the direct rays of the ſun; and, if they are well calculated to reflect calorific rays in ſummer, they muſt be equally well calculated to reflect thoſe frigoriſic rays by which we are cooled and annoyed in winter.'

* * * * * * * * *

Having eſtabliſhed by experience, ſays the London Monthly Review, that the proceſs of cooling is eeeilerated by blackening the ſurface of the heated ſubſtance, the count avows the following reſolution; which however reaſonable and philoſophic, will not fail, we think, to extort a ſmile from our readers:

'All I will venture to ſay on the ſubject is, that were I called to inhabit a very hot country, nothing ſhould prevent me from making the experiment of blackening my ſkin, or at leaſt of wearing a black ſhirt, in the ſhade, and eſpecially at night; in order to find out if by theſe means, I could not contrive making myſelf more comfortable.

'Several of the ſavage tribes which inhabit very cold countries, beſmear their ſkins with oil, which gives them a ſhining appearance. The rays of light are reflected copiouſly from the ſurface of their ſkin by the highly poliſhed ſurface of the oil with which it is covered.

'If that ſhould be the caſe, inſtead of deſpiſing thoſe poor creatures for their attachment to a uſeleſs and loathſome habit, we ſhould be diſpoſed to admire their ingenuity, or rather to admire and adore the goodneſs of their inviſible guardian and inſtructor, who teaches them to like, and to practiſe, what he knows to be uſeful to them.

'The Hottentots beſmear themſelves, and cover their bodies, in a manner ſtill more diſguſting. They think themſelves fine, when they are beſmeared and dreſſed out according to the loathſome cuſtom of their country. But who knows whether they may not in fact be more comfortable, and better able to ſupport the exceſſive heats to which they are expoſed? From ſeveral experiments which I made, with a view to elucidate that point (of which an account will be given to the ſociety at ſome future period) I have been induced to believe that the Hottentots derive advantages from that practice, exactly ſimilar to thoſe which the negroes derive from their black color.'

* * * * * * * * * *

'It is frequently uſeful, and is always amuſing to trace the differences in the cuſtoms and uſages of different countries to their cauſes. The French have for ages been remarkable for their fondneſs for ſoups, and for their ſkill in preparing them: now as national habits of this kind muſt neceſſarily originate at a very early period of ſociety, and muſt depend on peculiar local circumſtances, may not the prevalence of the cuſtom of eating ſoup in France be aſcribed to the open chimney fire places and wood fires, which have ever been common in that country?

'It is certain that in the infancy of ſociety, before the arts had made any conſiderable progreſs, families cooked their victuals by the ſame fire which warmed them. Kitchens then were not known; and the utenſils uſed in cooking were extremely ſimple, an earthen pot perhaps ſet down before the fire.—We have juſt ſeen, that with ſuch an apparatus, ſoups of the very beſt qualities would naturally be produced; and it is not ſurpriſing, that a whole nation ſhould acquire a fondneſs for a ſpecies of food, not only excellent in its kind, but cheap, nutritious, and wholeſome, and eaſily prepared.

'Had coals been the fuel uſed in France, it is not likely that ſoups would have been ſo generally adopted in that country; for a common coal fire is not favorable for making good ſoups; although with a little management the very beſt ſoups may be made, and every other proceſs of cookery be performed, in the higheſt perfection with any kind of fuel.'

HEALTH-OFFICE.

WHEREAS information has been given to the BOARD OF HEALTH, that malicious reports prevail in various quarters, of the exiſtence of a malignant fever in the town of Alexandria; it has by them been deemed proper to counteract the prevalence of ſuch unfounded rumors by a ſolemn declaration, that they are utterly falſe and groundleſs. In corroboration of which declaration, they hereto annex the certificate of the practiſing Phyſicians of the town; from which it will appear, that our citizens are bleſs'd with an unuſual portion of health at this time.

Recommendation.

THOSE perſons who have cellars or other places damp and foul, are earneſtly ſolicited to have them immediately white waſhed and frequently ventilated by opening the doors or windows thereof; and this is recommended from a thorough conviction that ſuch operations are healthful to thoſe perſons who are expoſed to the air of thoſe apartments at this and the approaching ſeaſon of the year: This meaſure was adopted here laſt ſummer by a great many perſons, and I was informed much to their comfort and ſatisfaction—and thoſe houſe-keepers whoſe funds are too limited for expenſive operations, may do what is here recommended, for the trifling ſum of 25 cents and a little labor with a broom, as one peck of unſlacked, well burned lime, will make white waſh ſufficient for a ſmall cellar.

A practice is too prevalent on Fridays and Saturdays every week, in ſeveral people, by bringing out and throwing in the ſtreet, litter, dirt, duſt, &c. immediately after the ſcavengers have paſſed their dwellings: It is hoped that good ſenſe and reflection, will preclude the neceſſity of noticing this habit in a way which may reſult in expence to thoſe who continue to purſue it.

I have of late obſerved, that too little attention is given by ſeveral perſons to the gutters in the ſtreets, which at this ſeaſon ought to be kept conſtantly clean. I hope this hint will convince the negligent, that unleſs the law be better complied with than heretofore, duty will impoſe upon me the diſagreeable taſk of endeavoring to enforce, by penalties, a compliance therewith.

It is with regret that I have to notice another practice attended with conſiderable inconvenience to thoſe, living near perſons who (as if it was a duty impoſed upon them by law) with great aſſiduity breed muſquitoes in barrels, tubs and caſks, containing water, &c. in and about their back yards. Of theſe citizens I with great humility ſolicit a ſuſpenſion of this operation for at leaſt ſixty days from this date; and beg leave to ſay, that a compliance with this requeſt will much oblige their
